► Man speeds away from RIDE checkpoint before rolling stolen vehicle at the airport

ANGELA
@METRONNEWS.CA

A 29-year-old London man is facing charges after police said he sped away from a RIDE program and blew past patrol officers at an estimated 160 kilometres per hour.

Const. Bob Hogan said a suspect was driving north on Highbury Avenue toward Brydges Street at about 1:50 a.m. yesterday when he saw the checkpoint near the intersection.

"He panicked, hit the brakes, (threw the pickup) into reverse and drove the wrong way into (oncoming traffic)," Hogan said.

Witnesses reported that the truck hit a utility pole at Highbury Avenue and Trafalgar Street. It then was spotted travelling east on Huron Street.

When officers got to Huron, they literally saw "a cloud of dust" and headlights in the distance.

"He was just flying," Hogan said.

Officers tracking the call then noticed a vehicle had crashed through a London airport security fence and rolled.

Charges

- ▶ Robert Needham faces charges of dangerous driving and two counts of possessing stolen property by London police.
- ▶ He could face more charges from a separate OPP investigation.

Robert Needham was arrested a short time later while walking along Robbins Hill Road, the street that runs around the airport after Huron Street comes to a dead end.

Police said the pickup had been reported stolen out of Strathroy-Caradoc Township and had stolen plates.

Inside the truck, police say they found stolen property including a chainsaw and a generator.

The Ontario Provincial Police were looking for those items as part of a break-and-enter investigation outside of London, Hogan said.

Needham was taken to hospital yesterday morning for treatment of minor injuries from the crash. No other injuries were reported.

Hundreds hit the ice for charity skate

Staff at the John Labatt Centre opened up the arena for the fourth consecutive year as a fundraiser for the Children's Aid Society. About 500 people laced up their skates and donated toys or cash to benefit the cause. Last year's event netted $10,000 worth of toys for the agency.

The banner features a blue gradient background with a white text area on the left. On the right, there are two headshots of smiling doctors, Dr. Richard Bains and Dr. David Johnson, in dark blue scrubs. The text on the left reads 'LASIK NOW, PAY IN 2013!' in large, bold, black capital letters. Below it is a large '$000' in a stylized yellow font, with 'down' under the first zero, 'payments' under the second, and 'interest' under the third. To the right of the doctors, the text 'LASIK MD doctors have performed over 500,000 procedures' is written in a smaller, white, sans-serif font. The right side of the banner has a black background with the 'LASIK MD' logo in white, followed by 'LONDON' and 'LASER VISION CORRECTION'. Below this is a large '$490' in white, with 'laser md' in a smaller blue circle to its right. A white box contains the text 'All-Laser LASIK Available'. At the bottom, there is a 'FREE Consultation: 1-855-895-2020 • www.lasikmd.com' and 'LONDON: City Plaza, 320 Dundas St.' The bottom right corner contains a small vertical text block with fine print.

Report on LHSC site comes to council table

City administrators are not recommending turning two buildings at the former South Street Hospital into affordable housing.

The plan's dismissal comes despite an architect's report indicating the heritage buildings are good candidates for "adaptive reuse."

While the buildings are structurally sound, their future use is limited by their configuration, the report says. Affordable housing would be the best bet for the old War Memorial Children's Hospital and the Colburne building, architect Allan Avis wrote in his report.

Still, the cost — a combined $19 million — of flipping the buildings is too much, city staff says.

Councillors will consider the report at today's planning committee meeting. • METRO

A 19-year-old man has been charged with possession of a stolen vehicle and failing to remain at the scene of the crash. AM980

Expected city surplus now even higher

► Projections reflect third-quarter budget data as of Sept. 30. ► City officials suggest money may be used for city spruce-up in advance of skating event

ANGELA MULLINS
@METRONEWS.CA

An expected end-of-year city surplus has grown.

The projection now sits at $4.6 million, up from the $3.8 million expected at the end of June, according to a report from London's chief financial officer. An additional $1-million surplus is forecast in the wastewater-treatment budget countered by an expected $100,000 deficit in the water budget, the report says.

CFO Martin Hayward will present the budget update today during a finance and administrative services committee meeting. He is recommending that the anticipated surpluses be placed in reserve funds and that the water-budget deficit be covered by money from a savings account.

The water-budget deficit is attributed to lower-than-expected water use, which means less revenue for the city. The extra $1 million in the wastewater-treatment budget comes partially from a dry summer that led to less storm water running into sewer drains, according to Hayward's report.

Hayward credits reduced personnel costs and a new Ontario Works funding model with much of the expected $4.6-million surplus in the property-tax budget.

The city has used a system called "gapping," leaving vacant positions open for a number of days, to save money on the person-

Hominick: 'I fought out of character'

► Thamesford native's record falls to 20-10 ► Seven-second loss ties UFC record for fastest knockout

Featherweight Mark (The Machine) Hominick stole the show when the UFC made its debut in Toronto last April by going the distance in a five-round thriller.

It was the complete opposite on Saturday night at UFC 140.

The Thamesford native lasted just seven seconds before losing by technical knockout to Chan Sung Jung, barely giving fans at Air Canada Centre time to sit in their seats after greeting the Canadian with a standing ovation.

Hominick missed with a left hand and Jung — nicknamed the Korean Zombie — caught him with a punch to the head. The South Korean landed a few more blows before the fight was stopped.

"I fought out of character," Hominick said. "I don't think anybody's ever seen me come out with a wild left hook leading the fight. I fought not as composed as I normally am."

sequences."

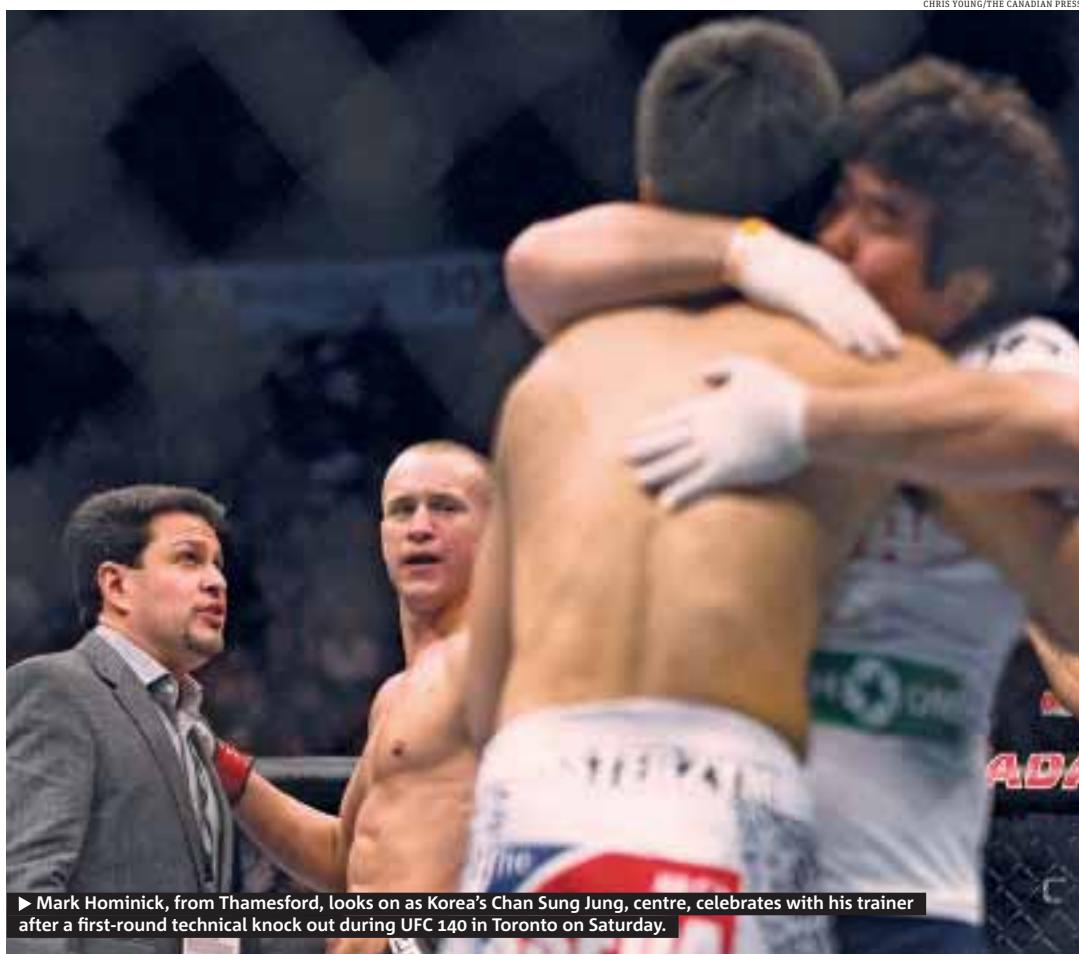

Hominick lost to UFC champion Jose Aldo in the co-main event at Rogers Centre last spring. He won the crowd over with his perseverance and came on strong in the final round despite a muffin-sized hematoma on his forehead.

Fans were hoping for an encore performance from Hominick in the first bout on the main card. UFC ring announcer Bruce Buffer's introduction for the Canadian could barely be heard over the crowd's roar.

The quick finish left almost everyone surprised.

"It was over so fast that it took me a few seconds to realize what just happened," Jung said. "When I hit him I knew immediately it was over."

Tories take to Twitter

► Staffers will respond to questions submitted in English and French at Treasury Board's town hall ► Clement to provide answers

NDP MP riled

- While the Opposition commended the idea of the consultations, NDP MP Charlie Angus scoffed at the idea that it represents a commitment to open government.
- Angus was particularly riled that it is Clement heading up the initiative, given the NDP's assertion that Clement has misled Canadians on the handling of funds allocated for the G8/G20 summits.
- "Because he goes on Twitter and uses words like crowdsourcing, people are going to be fooled," Angus said.
- "Open and accountable government is knowing how decisions are made."

The Conservatives are finally putting the social into their use of social media.

Treasury Board President Tony Clement will host the government's inaugural Twitter town hall this Thursday, taking questions for 90 minutes on the subject of developing an open government strategy for Canada.

While many MPs, as well as government departments and agencies, use social media tools like Facebook, Twitter and YouTube, they've all faced criticism for only using them as ways to push out information rather than interact in real-time with citizens.

That Clement is hosting the first live social media event isn't an accident.

His nickname in government circles is the "Minister for Twitter." He has over 19,000 followers and has used social media to make pronouncements of government policy as well as to speak directly to Opposition MPs, the media and Canadians, sometimes much to the chagrin of the prime minister's office.

RISKY MOVE FOR CLEMENT?

Digital public affairs strategist Mark Blevins said Tony Clement is taking a risk with holding the formal Twitter event.

There will be inevitable criticism of which questions are and aren't answered and there's the possibility that many won't be on topic.

But Blevins cautioned against undue criticism, noting the government has to be given the chance to make mistakes in figuring out how to use social media. THE CANADIAN PRESS

PM decries Egypt's weak economy

► IMF projects Egypt's economic growth to be only 1.2 per cent this year, down from 5 per cent in 2010

Egypt's new interim prime minister broke into tears in front of journalists yesterday as he spoke about the state of the country's economy, saying it was "worse than anyone imagines."

Egypt's transition in the months since Hosni Mubarak's ouster has been rocky, with protests against the military council leading the process, an increase in crime and the battering of the tourism industry that was once a pillar of the economy.

Kamal el-Ganzouri, the third temporary prime minister since Mubarak's ouster in February, said his priorities were the restoration of security and economic progress.

At one point in his news conference, el-Ganzouri teared up as he recalled seeing "an Egyptian man on TV saying, 'I want security, not bread.'"

He said austerity measures were needed to start reducing the deficit but that

- El-Ganzouri blamed the last decade of Mubarak's 30-year rule and the corruption that took place then for the ballooning deficit.

no new taxes will be imposed.

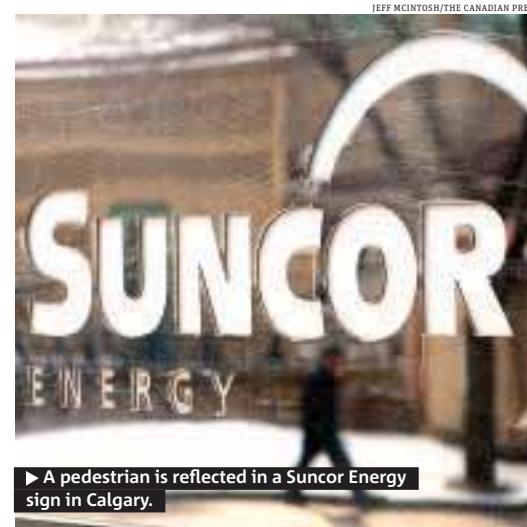

El-Ganzouri said his government will not consider loans from the International Monetary Fund until the outlook of the Egyptian budget becomes clear. The IMF previously offered a $3-billion loan, but Egyptian officials turned it down.

"Solidarity is needed to face the economic crisis and security problem for citizens to be pleased with the revolution," he said.

The word sherpa brings to mind trekking up Mount Everest. It brings forth images of dedicated carriers packing supplies up narrow passes while making things easier for others on the journey. That's the image that Nathan Ferguson hopes that you get when you hear the term Brew Sherpas.

Ferguson is one of the founding members of the group, a casual collective of folks who enjoy sampling suds from around the world. Seven months ago, he and a few friends noticed that they saw many of the same faces showing up at Gambrinus on King Street on Sunday nights. The pub's manager, Milos Kral, encourages appreciation of Ontario's craft-brewing industry by featuring different products from small breweries each Sunday, offering them at a reduced price. "So a lot of the same people would show up to try these different microbrews," says Ferguson, "and we thought that we'd get together and have a discussion group so we could learn more from each other. We want to help on the journey to knowledge, like sherpas."

The Brew Sherpas hold monthly tastings in members' homes or pubs.

They host special events, like pub crawls or food-pairing events. (There's one tomorrow night at the London Club). There's no cost for membership. Both males and females attend and range in age from mid-20s to mid-50s. They encourage responsible consumption of alcohol. It's not a drinking club; it's a beer-appreciation organization.

Some events feature chats with brewers, like Ryan Morrow of Nickel Brook, who recently met with the Sherpas at a tasting event at Gambrinus. "Ontario is finally catching up to the beer revolution that started in the U.S. and Quebec 15 years ago," he says.

Though the Sherpas consider Gambrinus their home base, they do frequent other pubs. "Part of what we want to do is build community and support bars that are trying to build up craft beers," says Ferguson.

Tasting events are often held in the homes of members so that they can enjoy the host's collection. "Some of our members cellar beer like wine drinkers cellar wine," explains Ferguson, but he insists that, because they are dedicated beer drinkers, the group's members are less pretentious than wine or Scotch aficionados.

"We appreciate good beer," says Mike Hayes, another of the founding members. "I don't care if a guy just wants to drink nothing but Coors Light all his life, but that's just not me. There are too many great beers to try."

To join the Sherpas on their journey of draught discovery, check them out on Facebook, email brewsherpa@gmail.com or follow them on Twitter @brewsherpa.

ALL I WANT FOR CHRISTMAS...

GIFT CARDS GROWING IN POPULARITY

Gift cards — a phenomenon that seemed new in 2000 — have practically taken over holiday gift giving.

The vast majority of retail companies now offer them, said Brent Houlden, national retail leader for Deloitte Canada. "From the customer's point of view it's all personalization, and simplicity, and convenience," he explained.

Simply put, gift cards are the answer to an age-old problem — the unwanted gift, said Houlden.

The beauty of a gift card is that it lets the gift recipient choose exactly what they want, said Tiffany Bourré, external communications manager for Hudson's Bay Company.

"It virtually eliminates the guess work from gift purchasing," said Bourré. It also eliminates the possibility of returns (and in some cases offending the gift giver by doing so.)

That said, the gift card still needs to suit the recipient, she advised. "There is no question that gift cards have become a more accepted alternative for gift giving in general, but fair to say that often they slant to a younger demographic."

Whatever your age, on many occasions gift cards make sure that gift givers and recipients avoid embarrassment or hard feelings, said Houlden. "If you bought me the red hat and I didn't want the red hat, then you're upset because I didn't like your taste," he explained. "That's why gift cards have taken off so much."

The only problem is that they can seem a little impersonal, said Houlden.

"If I'm giving you a wedding gift and I just give you cash, there's no emotional connection there," Houlden said. People want to be remembered for the gifts they give, he explained.

Now companies are looking for ways that gift givers can easily personalize their gift cards — digitally. In the next few years we'll see technologies tailored to allowing gift givers to send a personalized photo or video along with their gift cards, said Houlden.

Buyers can also get gift cards online without having to set foot in a store. Many brands have them available to purchase online, so they're easy to send to faraway friends and family.

The future is mobile and the days of the plastic gift card are numbered, said Houlden. "One person will send a gift card to another electronically and it'll just load into the gift recipient's cell phone," he predicted.

"I think it's the next generation that people should be watching for."

HOW TO GET MORE OUT OF GIFT CARDS THIS HOLIDAY SEASON

STRETCHING YOUR BUDGET

For the fifth year in a row, gift cards top the list of most popular presents to receive. But before you stock up on these holiday favourites, make sure you're getting the most for your money. Frances Ho, founder of CardSwap, Canada's leading site for buying and selling gift cards, offers these expert tips for stretching your budget a little further:

✿ Turn points from loyalty programs such as Air Miles or Aeroplan into gift cards.

✿ Browse sites such as CardSwap.ca (for Canada) or Plastic Jungle (U.S. only) to find gift cards for 10 to 15 per cent below face value.

✿ Avoid overspending: Use a prepaid Visa card to purchase all your gifts. Once the card is depleted, you are done!

✿ When you receive gift cards, save them for Boxing Day or early January. That's when stores offer their best deals, so your card has more buying power.

✿ Don't waste your gift cards by letting them sit in a drawer. If you haven't redeemed them by February, consider converting them to cash through a site like CardSwap.ca.

Ho also suggests rounding up old gift cards and selling them online to make some quick holiday cash. She says the average family has several unused cards lying around the house — and they could see as much as 92 per cent of that face value. That could offer a welcome boost to this year's gift-giving budget. Happy Shopping!

HOLIDAY ENTERTAINING MADE EASY WITH OUR FINEST

HIGH QUALITY FOODS EXCLUSIVE TO WALMART

Canadians don't want to sacrifice quality when they celebrate with family and friends this holiday season, said Sandra Farwell, director of private brands — foods for Walmart Canada.

That's why the company is introducing Our Finest, a new line of delectable high-quality foods exclusive to Walmart, said Farwell.

"Many Canadians are staying in this holiday, and that equals a lot of home cooking and entertaining," said Farwell.

Our Finest costs less than the national leading brands — appetizers start as low as $5 a box. "Entertaining should be easy and affordable," insisted Farwell.

FROM THE OUR FINEST MENU:

APPETIZERS

Farwell suggests starting the party with melt-in-your-mouth pastry appetizers, like the Our Finest salmon and dill in puff pastry or cheese and applewood smoked bacon mini tarts.

Authentic international favourites like mini vegetable samosas with tamarind sauce ($5), Greek spanakopita ($5), or an assortment of Angus beef, Italian, and Swedish meatballs ($8) are also a popular pre-dinner indulgence.

DRINKS

Find the perfect drink for the occasion from the wide selection of non-alcoholic sparkling beverages including mojito, sangria, and margarita ($2.77 for a pack of four).

MAIN COURSE

A tantalizing centrepiece to any holiday table, the Our Finest spiral ham is cured and naturally smoked with hickory chips. It comes pre-cooked and pre-sliced, with an easy-to-prepare glaze, so it's great for those who want to spend less time cooking and more time relaxing with friends and family.

DESSERT

The Our Finest chocolate and toffee collection ($8.97), the all-natural English wine gums ($4.98) and liquorice allsorts ($4.98) make a beautiful statement on a tiered serving dish, and provide enough variety to tickle the taste buds of all your guests.

Try finishing off the feast with the Our Finest candy cane ice cream ($4.97), made with real dairy cream, mint chocolate bark, and candy cane pieces.

"We're confident Canadians will be proud to serve these items as part of their festivities," Farwell said.

WHAT IS IT?

A new line of delectable foods from Walmart. They're easy to prepare and affordable — appetizers starting at $5 a box.

WHAT MAKES OUR FINEST DELICIOUS?

Recipes are made with high quality ingredients and were carefully chosen by a team of food experts.

THE FOOD

Find almost 100 dishes from wonton-wrapped shrimp to grain-fed young turkeys, basted with real butter to cocoa-dusted Belgian truffles.

HOW TO HOST A GREAT PARTY

KEEP IT SIMPLE

Sometimes the simplest dishes are the most delicious, and fine pre-prepared foods are perfect for taking the pressure off if you don't have much time to spare.

KNOW YOUR GUESTS

Understand your guests' likes and dislikes, and make sure to provide vegetarian options.

PRE-PREP

Get ready well before the party starts — the slicing and dicing, the food presentation, the decorating.

CREATE A MOOD WITH FESTIVE NAPKINS, PLATES, CUTLERY & GLASSES

Accent your home with festive candleholders, serving dishes, and other decorative touches to create a warm holiday atmosphere.

COMPILE THE PERFECT SOUNDTRACK

Consider the musical tastes of your guests, throw in some old favourites, and mix it up a little. Variety is key.

RELAX AND ENJOY THE PARTY

Make the time to chat with your guests. That's what really makes a great party — the good company and scintillating conversation.

A CANADIAN RETAIL ICON IS READY FOR THE HOLIDAYS

SEARS' GIFT CARDS OFFER CHOICE, FLEXIBILITY

In 1953, General Robert E. Wood, the legendary Chairman of Sears Roebuck, and Co., Chicago, sent a letter to Edgar G. Burton, President of the Robert Simpson Company of Toronto, to propose a partnership between their two companies in order to serve the Canadian market.

Today — almost 60 years later — Sears Canada is a multi-channel retailer with a network that includes 196 corporate stores, 285 hometown dealer stores, 31 home services showrooms, more than 1,700 catalogue merchandise pick-up locations, 108 Sears Travel offices and a nationwide home maintenance, repair, and installation network. Sears also publishes Canada's most extensive general merchandise catalogue and offers shopping online at sears.ca.

YES, WISHES DO COME TRUE — AT SEARS

Something that hasn't changed in six decades is Sears Canada's ability to make wishes come true, especially at Christmas time. Who's not familiar with the Sears Holiday Wish Book and the sight of a Sears store festively turned out for the Christmas season?

What has changed in 60 years is the Sears ability to stay current and relevant for Canadian consumers, including a strong online presence that's open 24/7 at sears.ca. If there's no time to visit the Sears store, busy moms and dads strapped for time can find almost anything online. And, for those hard-to-buy-for individuals, Sears offers gift cards that offer choice and flexibility when it comes to gift giving. Sears gift cards can be purchased and redeemed across different channels, including stores, online as well as through the catalogue.

CHOICE, CHOICE AND MORE CHOICE

"Cards can be redeemed towards almost anything Sears has to offer," says Carla Seaquist, Product Manager, Gift Cards. "That includes purchases made in our stores, for your next travel destination, for a new roof or windows, or for your next family photo shoot." The choices don't end there.

Along with its proprietary gift cards, Sears also sells third-party gift cards. "We now offer everything from iTunes and Petro-Canada cards to Chapters Indigo and long-distance calling cards. You could say that we are a destination for gift cards. We've also partnered with Life Experiences.ca — the Canadian leader in experience gifts. There's no need to go anywhere else for your gift," says Seaquist.

THE PERFECT GIFT IS IN THE CARDS

The holiday spirit is eluding Hollywood. Overall domestic revenues are expected to come in below the dismal $81 million haul a week ago, which had been the low weekend so far this year. This looks like Hollywood's worst total in more than three years, going back to the weekend after Labour Day in 2008, when overall grosses finished below $70 million.

The star-filled romance New Year's Eve led this weekend with a weak $13.7 million debut. Jonah Hill's comedy The Sitter opened at No. 2 with just $10 million.

Success 'beyond anyone's wildest dreams'

► Arcade Fire coming off monumental year ► Triumphs continue to bring attention to Montreal music scene

It was a year in which Arcade Fire burned brightly.

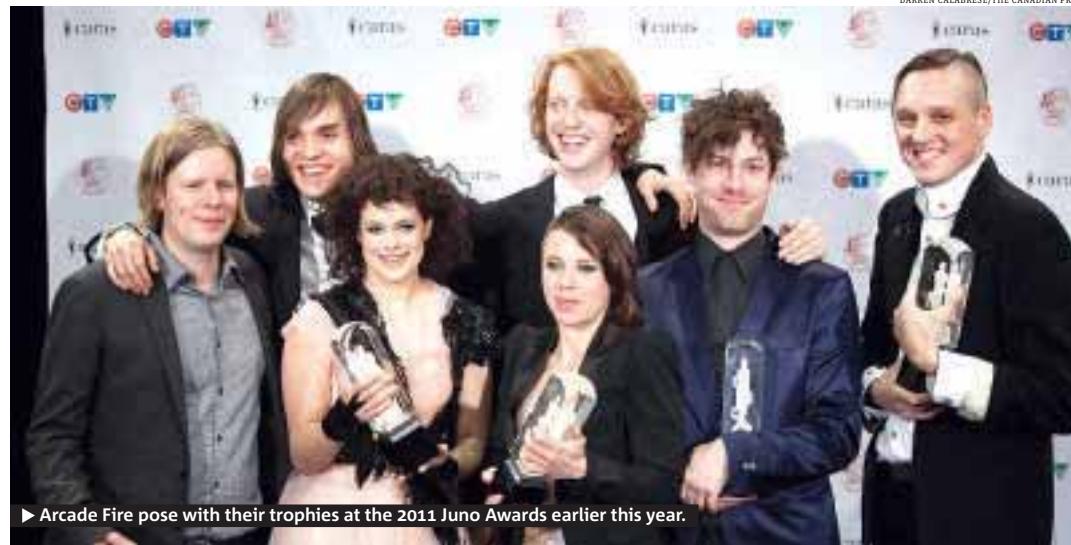

The coveted Grammy Award for Album of the Year, honouring their latest release The Suburbs, kicked off a slew of honours won by the Montreal-based indie band in 2011.

By the end of the year, they had also swept the same categories at the Juno, Polaris and Brit awards, and taken home anglophone album of the year from Quebec's L'Autre Gala de L'ADISQ.

After giving an international shout-out to their Montreal hometown at the Grammys, they also found time to say thanks to their local fans in September with a free outdoor show downtown, which packed in around 100,000 people.

And that gratitude is about to continue into the new year as the band says it's going to invest in helping young artists while also working on their next undisclosed recording project.

"Their success has gone beyond anyone's wildest dreams — even them, I believe," says Dan Seligman, the creative director and co-founder of the Pop Montreal indie music festival, which hosted the outdoor concert.

Seligman, who has booked the band often during the 10 years of his festival and in other gigs, says any attention Arcade Fire gets benefits the local music scene.

"The hope is that it'll continue to help other bands get attention and become successful, touring musicians and have careers."

The award haul sparked a brief amplification of the buzz around the band, which first attracted the indie scene's spotlight to Montreal around 2004-2005 with the release of their first album, Funeral.

The New York Times profiled them while Rolling Stone even dubbed Montr-al "the new Seattle" at the time.

Leah Greenblatt, a senior editor at New York-based Entertainment Weekly magazine, said that even though they had been around for a while, Arcade Fire's Grammy win caused jaws to drop. Even the band looked stunned as TV cameras caught their reaction.

"I was shocked," Greenblatt said, explaining that as a longtime writer on the indie music scene she had often seen her favourite artists ghettoized into indie or alternative music categories.

"I just assumed that Arcade would get the alternative album of the year," she said, speculating that besides the quality of the album, the Grammys were trying to appeal to a younger audience this year.

"It sort of forced a lot of people to sit up and listen and maybe pay attention a little more to what was happening in the smaller circles of music."

MUSIC CRITIC STEVE GUIMOND ON ARCADE FIRE'S 2011 AWARD HAUL

"In some sense it was a really old-fashioned record because it was sort of open about being ambitious and about being thematic. They weren't too cool to try. They were trying to make a big record and they succeeded."

Greenblatt recalled attending the band's party after the Grammy was announced.

"They were pretty ecstatic," she said. "I think they were all in shock, honestly. They looked a little stunned but they were thrilled."

Arcade Fire declined requests to discuss their big year. Their publicist said they were taking a break after a gruelling tour.

Return of the mack

► J.R. deals again as original cast members filming reboot to popular series

J.R. Ewing has returned to Dallas.

With Larry Hagman reprising his role as the conniving Texas oilman, filming is underway at locations all over the city for TNT's new television series Dallas, which will also see the return of Patrick Duffy as J.R.'s brother Bobby and Linda Gray as J.R.'s ex-wife Sue Ellen, along with a new generation of Ewings.

And, of course, the spotlight also returns to the city itself, with its distinctive skyline rising from the prairie.

"We're trying to give the show a real sense of place and Dallas has a real personality," said location manager John Patterson, adding, "It's a city that does things in a big way. That's part of J.R. and part of what we try to give the show — a sense of the city, which is big, very well done, shiny, new and looking toward the future."

TNT has ordered 10 episodes of the series, set to air in summer 2012.

Filming for the series, entirely shot in Dallas, began mid-October and is expected to wrap in late January.

"There was just no way we were going to film anywhere else," said executive producer Cynthia Cidre, who also wrote the pilot for the new series, a "mix of the old world and the new world."

The original series, which aired from 1978 to 1991, enjoyed popularity around the world as viewers tuned in to watch the scheming Ewing family.

As the plot twisted and turned season after season, the series contributed to some of TV's most memorable moments. After Bobby died in a season cliffhanger in 1985 after being hit by a car, the entire next season was revealed to have been a prolonged dream sequence when his former wife, with whom he had reconciled, wakes up to find him alive, taking a shower.

The 1986-87 season then marks Duffy's return to the cast after a year-long absence.

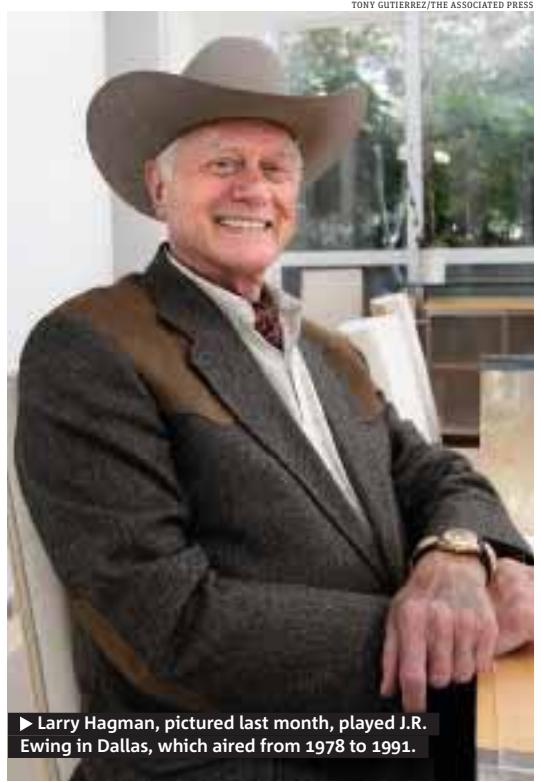

And, of course, there was the cliffhanger in 1980 that left the whole world in suspense.

The catchphrase "Who shot J.R.?" became part of the common vernacular as viewers waited to find out who had fired on J.R.

When viewers tuned in for the answer on Nov. 21, 1980, the shooter was revealed to be J.R.'s vengeful mistress, who was also his sister-in-law.

That episode was seen by more people than any TV program in history up until that time.

Aniston the Sexiest Woman of All Time?

Men's Health has dubbed Jennifer Aniston the Sexiest Woman of All Time, but while she's flattered by their decision, Aniston insists the title would've gone to someone else if she had any say in it.

"It's a tie between Brigitte Bardot and Gloria Steinem," she tells the magazine. "But if I had to choose one, I'd say Gloria because, well, she's the full package. That's sexy."

Raquel Welch, Marilyn Monroe, Britney Spears and Madonna round out the top five on the magazine's list, while Angelina Jolie comes in at No. 10.

Dough truths

Generations of neophyte bakers have shrugged off parental warnings about how eating chunks of raw cookie dough could make them sick to their stomachs.

Now, researchers who investigated a 2009 outbreak of food-borne illness in the United States are providing extra proof for mom and dad.

For years, concerns about raw dough have centred on the idea that raw eggs could contain bacteria such as salmonella. In this case, though, investigators were looking into a different bacteria — Shiga toxin-producing Escherichia coli, or STEC.

The outbreak didn't affect Canada, but 35 Americans were admitted to hospital. Studies showed 33 of 35 patients consumed raw cookie dough.

Monitoring future deforestation

► Richard Branson promises to use his satellites to keep an eye on forests ► Speaks to Metro about nuclear war

Sir Richard Branson has a message: we can save our Earth from nuclear Armageddon and environmental meltdown alike.

With Cutnukes.org, Branson pushes for fewer atomic bombs. His airliners use waste as fuel, and he has created a sanctuary for Malagasy lemurs displaced by deforestation. Now he plans to monitor global deforestation with satellites, he tells Metro.

You're about to open a reserve for ringtailed lemurs that have been displaced by deforestation in Madagascar. Are you planning to help other species that have been displaced by deforestation?

The lemur is such a beautiful species. We simply have to save the lemurs, and I'm trying to help other species as well.

For the past several months I've travelled around the world to save sharks, and soon I'll be travelling to India to try to save the blue tiger.

When it comes to deforestation, of course humans who have been displaced are very important, but animal species are equally important. More important, actually.

Deforestation is often caused by local subsistence farmers. What's the solution?

One thing we can do about illegal logging is discover it before it's too late. That's why I've just launched a new initiative based at my spaceport. We'll run have satellites that will monitor forests to see where forests are being cut down.

You're in favor of eliminating nuclear weapons. Why should good countries get rid of their nuclear weapons when bad countries still have them?

They shouldn't completely eliminate them. What we're suggesting is that nuclear weapons states get rid of their nuclear weapons in steps. From a deterrent point of view, a country only needs 300 nuclear weapons. Getting rid of nuclear weapons would save a lot of money and would solve many of the world's current deficit problems.

In other words, is the global recession a good thing for nuclear disarmament?

Definitely. For example, one of the easiest things President Obama could do to solve the US budget crisis is getting rid of 1,000 nuclear warheads.

Is your interest in nuclear weapons an extension of your green involvement?

Yes. I've been visited Hiroshima and Nagasaki to see the effects of nuclear weapons. And it's an extension of my interest in solving global conflicts.

That's why I fund The Elders, an organization

"We have to deal with environmental problems in an entrepreneurial spirit ... Millions of jobs could be created worldwide."

RICHARD BRANSON

founded by Nelson Mandela that works to solve global conflicts.

The world has been talking about environmental problems for so long. Do you see any reasons for optimism?

Absolutely. We have to deal with environmental problems in an entrepreneurial spirit. For example, Virgin's new aviation fuel uses waste from steel mills. Millions of jobs could be created worldwide by greening our cities.

The environment would benefit, the cities would benefit, regular people would benefit, and it would stop money pouring out to the Middle East.

Even if we solve all the world's environmental problems, the world might be wiped out if Iran drops a nuclear bomb....

If Iran dropped a nuclear bomb nuclear weapon states would quickly obliterate Tehran, so I don't think it will.

The bigger risk is terrorists using nuclear weapons, but we have to set a moral example so terrorists don't feel the need.

All money raised in the Christmas Kettles stays in the local community in which it was raised to support programs for people in need.

What are your thoughts on regifting? Lisa of Edmonton

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Regifting is definitely an eco-friendly form of recycling.

I know guilt holds many people back. My advice is to get over it. Regifting doesn't have to carry an air of insincerity and thoughtlessness.

There are times when it's appropriate, and maybe even appreciated.

It's couth to regift a book you've read.

Hand-me-downs or a used coffee grinder? Not so much.

That's what Craigslist, Freecycle and clothing-donation bins are for.

You can regift right out in the open — host a regifting-themed holiday exchange at work or with the family.

Regifting is not just a way to get rid of bad gifts; it's also a way to find them new homes with people who will appreciate them.

Even Oprah condoned regifting on her Favourite Things episode back in 2008. And if Oprah says it's OK...

Keep in mind a few general rules: regift unto others as you would have them regift unto you.

And let common sense prevail.

Don't use a gift before regifting it and do not give something back to the original gift-giver.

The latter is a common rookie mistake but one you'll make only once — and if nothing else, it always makes for a great story.

Let it go to your head

A new study suggests that feeling powerful really does go to people's heads — and that's a good thing.

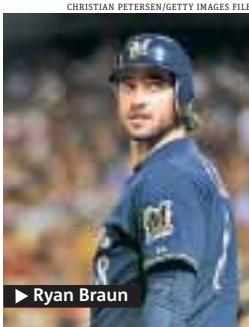

The study was co-authored by Li-Jun Ji, a professor at Queen's University and a social psychologist who specializes in relationships between culture and thinking. Power — defined as the ability to influence others — makes people think differently, says Ji.

In North America, a feeling of power leads to thinking in a focused and analytical way, and Ji says that that's a good way to think when pursuing personal goals in this society.

Thinking analytically allows you to focus on a goal and how to achieve it without being distracted by the surroundings or context, she says.

"What's most interesting about this study is the idea that thinking is flexible, not rigid or innately pre-programmed," says Ji. "We are able to attune our style of thinking to the needs of the situation. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MVP Braun facing ban for alleged PED use

Ryan Braun certainly doesn't fit the image fans conjure up when they hear that a baseball slugger has been accused of using performance-enhancing drugs.

Since he joined the Milwaukee Brewers, Braun has belted big home runs not with cartoonishly large muscles, but with a sweet swing and an ultra-quick bat. Last season, he helped drive the Brewers to the playoffs and was voted the NL's Most Valuable Player.

Now Braun finds himself fighting a 50-game suspension after news leaked that he has tested positive. Braun's representatives steadfastly maintain his innocence.

But there is a long history of athletes accused of taking banned drugs insisting they did so to recover from injuries. Sports medicine experts acknowledge the drugs may help — raising the possibility Braun might have been doing just that.

ESPN cited two sources Saturday in first reporting the result, saying Braun tested positive for elevated levels of testosterone, adding that a later test by the World Anti-Doping Agency lab in Montreal determined the testosterone was synthetic.

A spokesman for Braun said in a statement issued to ESPN and The Associated Press that "there are highly unusual circumstances surrounding this case which will support Ryan's complete innocence."

"There was absolutely no intentional violation of the program," Matthew Hiltzik said in a statement sent by the four-time all-star left fielder's representatives.

► UFC president White says light-heavyweight champion has potential to be 'the greatest ever' after successful title defence Saturday in Toronto

Jon 'Bones' Jones is looking ahead to a vacation and several months off. His rivals in the UFC light-heavyweight division would be well-served to use that time wisely.

"I just don't see anybody beating this guy any time soon," UFC president Dana White said after Jones choked out Lyoto 'The Dragon' Machida at 4:26 of the second round to retain his title at UFC 140 Saturday night.

"He's a young guy, he's got a lot of things to learn in the sport still — more than just fighting," added White.

"If he stays on the right track, does the right things, this guy could go down as the greatest ever."

Jones, 24, believes that is his destiny and he is well on his way to getting there.

Saturday's win completed an amazing year for Jones.

The 24-year-old stopped up-and-comer Ryan 'Darth' Bader in February, then de-throned Mauricio 'Shogun' Rua in March. In September, he beat former title-

Four fights. Four wins. Three champions beaten.

At six-foot-four with a 84.5 inch reach — longest in the UFC — Jones is hard to attack. And if you manage to close the gap, Jones' arsenal is stocked with kicks and strikes. He can also damage you with elbows or choke you out on the ground.

That's what happened Saturday.

"I have never fought anyone like him, so the first round was very, very confusing for me," Jones said of the Brazilian southpaw.

A second-round cut to Machida was a turning point. The two clinched at the fence and Jones wrestled him to the ground, carving open his forehead with a series of elbows.

Machida said he started having blurry vision afterwards and admitted to thinking it was "maybe the beginning of the end." Jones said his confidence skyrocketed — "Just seeing his blood really let me know 'All right, he bleeds. Let's do this."

When the fight returned to the feet, Jones grabbed Machida at the fence and locked in a standing guillotine choke. The Brazilian didn't tap and toppled when referee John McCarthy stepped in and the champ finally let go.

Jones (15-1) becomes the first 205-pound champion since Chuck 'The Iceman' Liddell to make back-to-back successful title defences.

The show, the second for the UFC in Toronto, did not generate the buzz of the first. UFC 129 drew a UFC-record 55,724 to the Rogers Centre in April. Saturday's event attracted 18,303 at Air Canada Centre.
